Then Wendy saw the shadow on the floor, looking so draggled, and she was frightfully sorry for Peter.

“I shall sew it on for you ... I daresay it will hurt a little.”

“Oh, I shan’t cry,” said Peter ... jumping around in the wildest glee. He thought he had attached the shadow himself. “How clever I am!” he crowed rapturously. “Oh, the cleverness of me!”

With fairy dust and Peter Pan, the three Darling children fly off through their open window to Neverland. What could be more grand than an adventure with pirates, Indians, mermaids and no grownups?
